

The Great Pacific Northwest Roundup

A rugged region known for its cutting-edge tech spawns a special breed of yacht of yacht

BY CHRIS CASWELL

Northcoast

Purchased in 2003 by Stephen Yadfish, whose Yachtfish Marine on Seattle's Lake Union is a popular Northwest yard for refits, the company has just completed hull and superstructure for a 125-foot composite motoryacht originally designed by Jack Sarin for Crescent Yachts. A spec yacht, Northcoast is ready to complete the interior to an owner's requirements. Northcoast has also built several 85-to-87-foot motoryachts, with the latest being Fortuna 2 in 2007. The company is also offering a 117-foot catamaran motoryacht with a 30-foot beam and either twin waterjet or surface props for a top speed of 65 mph. www.northcoastyachts.com

